There is still a very large number of people in the UK with a Merchant Navy background in need of support. The Merchant Navy employed around 200,000 people at any one time until the 1970s and these people are now in, or approaching retirement. Many of these people had no pension provision and had little chance to accumulate savings.

The naval historian and retired merchant navy captain recounts the contributions of Britain's civilian ships during WWII in this "cracking read" (The Bridgend & Porthcawl Gem). The first British casualties of the Second World War were not members of the Royal Navy, the army, or the Royal Air Force. They were British merchant seamen on the transatlantic passenger liner SS Athenia, torpedoed by a German U-30 submarine on September 3, 1939. For the duration of the war, Britain's merchant fleet performed a vital role, carrying the essential supplies that kept the country running during the darkest days and made victory possible. Their achievements came at a terrible cost with 2,535 British oceangoing merchant ships being sunk and, of the 185,000 men and women serving in the British Merchant Navy at the time, 36,749 sacrificed their lives. Another 4,707 were wounded and 5,720 ended up as prisoners of war. Their casualty rate of twenty-five percent was second only to RAF Bomber Command's. Thoroughly researched and full of fascinating true accounts, Bernard Edwards's were the worst. Navigating through the endless patch of black water, there would be a growing tension within the crew to see a white dot slowly creeping up towards the ship, getting closer by the minute. With no visibility, you had no idea what was approaching towards you. The deafening silence could make the smallest of waves splashing against the ship seem terrifying. The smiles would vanish, the sleep would disappear and everyone would unite in silent prayer to get across the line." Waters of the Night depicts the drama and emotion as Somali pirates try and take over two vessels in international waters when they're least expecting it. Little do they know the pirates are following the orders of the officers of Guliztan, a terror state wishing to inflict maximum damage to the Indian coastline on the eve of their 75th Independence Day. This fictional novel gives insight into the minds of the ship's crew as they fight against piracy and terror for their lives, for their ship and, above all, for the country they love.

When John Lee joined the Merchant Navy he had no idea of the adventures which were to come his way over the next ten years. An innocent sixteen year old from East Yorkshire, he was first apprenticed to the toughest of trampship companies before experiencing the potentially explosive delights of life on an oil tanker. Finally, as a young officer enjoying rather more civilised surroundings, he is obliged to learn the art of polite conversation as he mixes with affluent first class passengers and takes charge of a memorable rescue at sea.... The book is a fascinating insight into life in the Merchant Navy of the 1950's and 60's peppered with a wealth of characters and stories. Often hilarious, but always truthful and entertaining, life on board and in port is described in all its facets—the typhoons, icy, bone-chilling North Atlantic gales, freak waves and near disasters, awful food and the demon drink. The stories and anecdotes come thick and fast of gnarled seadogs and eccentric captains, knife fights and bandits as well as sex pests and the beguiling females who haunt the dock gates. This entertaining book is a window on a way of life now largely gone, a tribute to that unique breed of men who put their skills and mettle

Writing with years of experience of sea life, Bernard Edwards vividly recounts a varied selection of truly classic warships gun actions, emphasising the often sudden change from routine sailing to devastating and potentially lethal combat with an almost unseen enemy. Specific actions include one of the earliest naval gun battles between ironclads at the Yalu River in 1894, celebrated battle honour epics such as the Falkland Islands in 1914 and Cape Matapan in 1941, night encounters in the Pacific or the busy English Channel, confused and fickle battles such as Dogger Bank and Heligoland Bight in 1914, and lone duels to the death on the high seas such as Carmania and Cap Trafalgar in 1914 and Stephen Hopkins and Stier in 1942. Bernard Edwards skilfully sets the scene for each action, explaining the background to the naval war at the time as well as that of the individual ships involved before retelling the stirring and dramatic story of each actual clash. Throughout all accounts too there is the recognition that the warship against warship gun battle, while now part of naval history, was a unique experience that often epitomised the most splendid traditions of navies and courage in the face of the enemy.
