In his essay on Idealism and naturalism in Gothic sculpture and painting, art is no longer an autonomous phenomenon, but the expression of a 'world view'. The history of art is no longer seen as an unbroken chain of development, but rather as a dialectic process impelled by the 'contrast between the ideational and the material' (Gegensatz zwischen Geist und Materie). Now Dvořák assigned equal importance to naturalism and to its opposite, the fundamentally idealistic character of Gothic art, which he had still vehemently denied in 1904. -Excerpt from the essay Max Dvořák and the History of Medieval Art by Hans H. Aurenhammer (see link below).

From more than nine hundred poems left behind at the poet's death, Donald Justice has chosen the seventy-four representative works that comprise The Comma After Love: Selected Poems of Raeburn Miller. By turns rueful and amused, intimate and restrained, these poems speak movingly about the difficulties of love and faith, the pleasures of friendship and poetry, the loneliness and disappointments of the solitary life. In his introduction to this volume, Donald Justice calls Raeburn Miller "a natural poet who found writing a thing he did simply as a part, an important part, of staying alive," and discovers in these poems an "expansive and unshakably romantic spirit that drives the work and in the end proves exhilarating."
