A big lie is a propaganda technique. The expression was coined by Adolf Hitler, when he dictated his 1925 book Mein Kampf, about the use of a lie so "colossal" that no one would believe that someone "could have the impudence to distort the truth so infamously". Hitler believed the technique was used by Jews to blame Germany's loss in World War I on German general Erich Ludendorff, who was a prominent nationalist and antisemitic political leader in the Weimar Republic.

The big lie is a falsehood so outrageous and so obviously wrong, in retrospect people can hardly believe that anyone took it seriously. The most famous example of the "big lie" is the Salem Witch Trials, where four bored teenage girls convinced their pastor they were possessed by the devil and that dozens of people in their community were agents of Satan.

The "Big Lie" Behind COVID-19 - American Consequences

In the early 1930's, the Nazi Party would gain control of a torn nation with much suffering from the great depression with masses of unemployed. It is ironic that Germany needed a savior and Hitler pitched his propaganda program as their salvation. Germany fell for the "Big Lie" with much eagerness and wrongly placed their hatred on innocent people.

The Big Lie explores what middle England might be like circa 2013 if we had surrendered to Nazi Germany in World War II. The premise arose from the author's young son asking that question at the dinner table (btw if you read this book, make sure not to miss the author's afterword which is after the list of helpful German words and phrases at the back of the book as it's a great read in itself).

Big lies are usually quite heavy. Carrying them over our head becomes a tedious task. We create a lie to save us; however, it makes us sink in the swamp of guilt and regret. In the pursuit of avoiding a harsh truth, life becomes even more miserable than before, and spilling the beans also gets tougher.
